NONPROFIT PARTNERS

The California Community Foundation supports a diverse portfolio of high-impact college access and success organizations serving low-income students in Los Angeles County. Each year, these nonprofit partners collectively help tens of thousands of students get to and through college, graduating at rates far higher than local or national averages. These organizations contribute to the cohort through shared best practices, a collective data system and other collaborative ventures.

YOUNG MEN OF COLOR COHORT

In 2017, LASIF launched a new initiative to better reach and serve young men of color (YMOC) as college pipeline programs often disproportionately reach more young women than young men. This two-year, $2 million initiative is designed as a learning process, fueled through the funding of action-oriented projects. Partners share promising program strategies and outcomes in an effort to contribute to a cohort-based learning community.
