Resource Guide: Community Empowerment & Voter Participation

BACKGROUND

The power of voters at the ballot box is one of the most direct ways communities in Los Angeles County can create change. Through the vote, communities elect leaders who will advance policies that address their needs and adopt ballot measures and propositions that have direct impact on the services and investments in their communities. In many high need communities, however, voter participation is persistently low. We cannot create a more equitable Los Angeles County without ensuring our highest need communities exercise their voice at the ballot box.

NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Organizations working to empower communities and increase voter participation this November and beyond include:

NOTE: We compiled this list based on input from the community. This is not meant to be an exhaustive list as we recognize there are many organizations in LA and across the region working to advance civic engagement and voter engagement.
